Leaving more time for student questions on the next week's problem sets during ta discussions would be helpful. Discussions sometimes felt useless when it was just going over last week's pset answers which are already posted online and available

I did not have Anna for my TA sessions, but I found her very helpful in explaining problems to me, so I would attend her office hours every week. She was always willing to break down problems for me as slowly as I needed, and helped me occasionally even outside of her office hours.

Anna did an excellent job of running the discussion section and making it useful to us. It was at an inconvenient time, but when I went I felt like I always got something out of it. Other TAs' office hours surrounding psets and exams were also helpful.

I wish that she had spent more time engaging with the discussion section, but Zoom obviously makes that very difficult.

Anna Ziff has been the best TA I've met at Duke. She was very helpful breaking down complex topics and giving us a comprehensive understanding of math heavy concepts. Statistics can be a hard subject to learn but Anna made it less daunting in her office hours. She was so kind to stay longer during her office hours if we didn't understand a concept and needed more time to go over topics. She also created some practice problems for us which were VERY helpful for us to understand concepts. As someone who learns by solving problems and in a more "applied" way, this teaching style was so helpful and I really appreciate her effort in doing these practice problems for us in office hours because it later helped me to break down the daunting problems in the problem set.

Anna is doing an amazing job in her office hours and discussion sections. It's hard to think about constructive tips to give her because she's already doing an amazing job. I love how she uses different colors to circle and highlight things in her explanations. She is super clear in her explanations and points out things we should put in the "cheat sheet" for the exam and key formulas to know which is super helpful. When you're first introduced to a subject it's hard to know what exactly is super important to know and "memorize" by heart so her pointing out "the obvious" is very helpful. She explains math concepts really well and breaks things down in sort of a "socratic learning style" by asking students questions and doesn't give you the answer right away to help you think. This method of teaching has been very helpful because it forces you to try and get the info from your head and helps so much with the learning. I honestly don't have a single tip where she could improve... I would just say she keeps doing what she's doing because it's very helpful and I really appreciate the effort she puts in. I like how she refers to screenshots of the lecture and reminds us when things were mentioned in class. I felt like she wants us to succeed and learn and going to her office hours was inspiring.

Anna was super helpful and happy to answer any questions we had about course material during discussion. Even though students weren't super engaged due to the evening timing of our discussion section, she kept the energy up and helped our learning.
